Big night for ski ace Oliver

TEENAGE alpine ski racer Oliver Weeks received the Young Sportsperson of the Year Award, with fellow teens Betty Baker and Jack Lewis commended as runners-up.

Oliver, 14, was selected for the British U16 Squad this year, and competed for Great Britain in FIS (Federation International de Ski) races in Slovenia and Italy. In the top-ranked GBR race series, Oliver was U16 and Overall Indoor champion, U16 Outdoor champion, and also Overall Combined Indoor and Outdoor Champion.

He is a dedicated ambassador for SnowSport England, and assists on various training camps for the alpine sport.

Betty Baker is another 14-year-old with a bright future.

She has already established herself as an extremely talented equestrian competing in ODE (one day eventing), dressage shows, jumping and cross country.

As well as nurturing her own talent she also schools and brings on young ponies, taking them from their first backing to entering competitions.

With the passion she has for the sport Betty is on track for her goal of being on the British under 18 team.

Finally, Jack Lewis, winner of the U19/School Team of the Year award with Lucas Marshall, was a runner-up in this category.

The Draycote Water Sailing Club member became the RS Tera Pro World Champion this year, where his sheer skill and determination saw him win ten of the 14 races.

The success was followed with fifth place in the RS Feva Worlds and he was crowned European Champion. Jack trains hard, going to the gym three times a week and is always training whether the weather is in his favour or not!

He is certainly taking great strides towards his end goal of entering the Olympics in the future.
